THE COLOR-LINE IN MINNISSIPPL. The tax-payers of Mississippi are preparing for a desperate battle in Novem ber next. They seem to feel that if the Radical plunderers who have so long ruled the State succeed in perpetuating power they are undone; that the worst of their woes and their fore will have failen in fell destruction upon them, and that there is nothing but wreck and ruin and desolation left them. It has been southern States to escape the rule of them in their religious views. Radical corruption, Mississippl is struggling for deliverance. But we regret of Mississippi, we regret to say, is strangest thing of all is that in the counties where the whites have a majority they are opposed t the color-line; and in the counties day last, Colonel Lamar, in the district convention which nominated him for re-election to congress, offered the folre-election to congress, offered the following, which was unanimously adopted:

It seems true that there was a time when a price per head was set on these little creatures by some "parishes and municipal cor-porations." These have burned harmless old women as witches in their time and done many other foolish things. It is highly creditable to the good conduct of these birds that in most cases the growing intelligence of the community has abolished these laws, and that, instead, they are now favorable to sparrow protection. Here before us is an account of the doings of intelligent people at Halle, in Germany, who rook especial pains during the last hard winter to save their sparrows. We are told they established twenty-two stations, at each of which the birds were fed three times a day. They conclude their report by observing that "the expense, it is believed, will be repaid a hundred fold by the destruction of noxious insects."
